

hospitality design

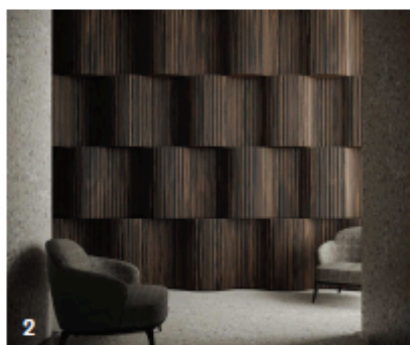

august 2023 hospitalitydesign.com

in the groove

the product marketplace

hd Presenter of expo+ conference

WARM WOOD TONES

Always inviting, faux or real wood adds an earthy and natural element to interiors. Indeed, the material's textured tones are often replicated, as in Koroseal's Majestic Driftwood wallcovering pattern [1], which resembles wood but is made with vinyl, much like Ikonn's [2] flexible and wavy milled panels that are crafted from a water-resistant MDF core in a variety of finishes. Similarly, the eco-friendly and highly durable Bodaq Interior Film [3] resembles an oak panel, making it nearly indistinguishable from real wood. When it comes to the real thing, however, the sleek and distinctive silhouette of the Jagger seating collection from Arhaus [4] is enhanced by its solid, reinforced mahogany frame. Perched on hand-stained legs, the delicate profile creates a striking effect.

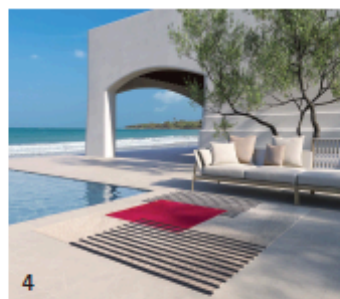

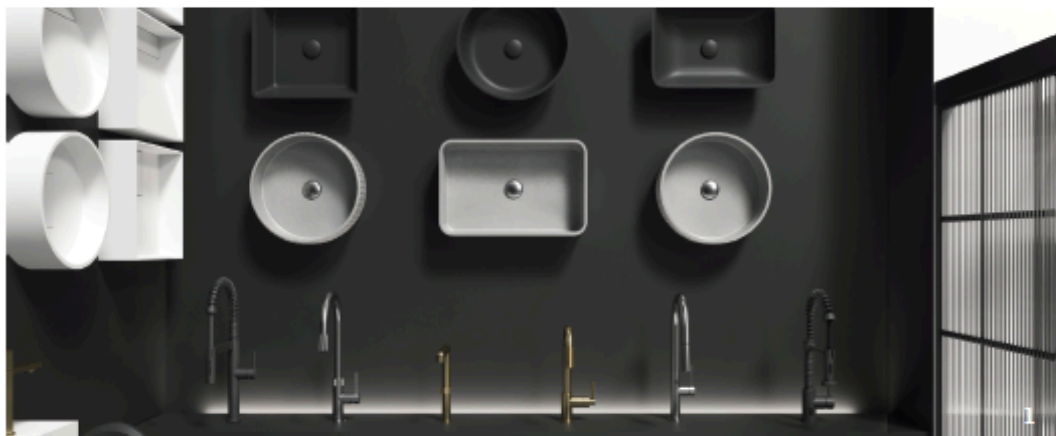

KOROSEAL.COM
IKONNL.COM
BODAQ.COM
ARHAUS.COM

TIMELESS BLACK AND WHITE

The classic color scheme evokes sophistication and luxury, fostering a sense of depth and dimension. For example, matte black kitchen and bathroom faucets, shower panels, bathroom sinks, and shower doors from VIGO Industries [1] craft an elevated experience, while Pavilion's Sendcastle collection of stools [2] explores contrasting horizons with a monochromatic structure that is simple in form. Hulasol's a combination lamp and sun umbrella [3] transforms the outdoors with its powdercoated stainless steel and water-repellent fabric in either white or black, and Masi from NOW Carpets [4] is full of unexpected beauty with a pop of red that adds energy to the geometric design.

VIGOINDUSTRIES.COM
PAVILION-FURNITURE.COM
HULASOL.COM
NOWCARPETS.COM

WARM WOOD TONES

Always inviting, faux or real wood adds an earthy and natural element to interiors. Indeed, the material's textured tones are often replicated, as in Koroseal's Majestic Driftwood wallcovering pattern [1], which resembles wood but is made with vinyl, much like Ikonni's [2] flexible and wavy milled panels that are crafted from a water-resistant MDF core in a variety of finishes. Similarly, the eco-friendly and highly durable Bodaq Interior Film [3] resembles an oak panel, making it nearly indistinguishable from real wood. When it comes to the real thing, however, the sleek and distinctive silhouette of the Jagger seating collection from Arhaus [4] is enhanced by its solid, reinforced mahogany frame. Perched on hand-stained legs, the delicate profile creates a striking effect.

BODAQ.COM

